Website Privacy Statement

How information is handled when you visit our website, contact us, or inquire about working with us.

Effective September 26, 2026

PUBLIC

1. What this statement covers

This statement covers the public Quentin & Dundee website and information you choose to send through its published contact channels. It describes the site's current functionality. Questions or privacy requests can be sent to privacy@quentindundee.com.

Client projects may involve different information, systems, and responsibilities. If Q&D processes information for an institution, organization, or campaign, the relevant engagement terms and that organization's privacy notices govern that work. This website statement does not authorize the collection or use of donor, audience, patient, student, or campaign information for a client project.

2. Information you choose to provide

An inquiry may include your name, organization, role, email address, telephone number, interests, and the context you share about a potential engagement. A careers email may include your résumé, experience, portfolio, and correspondence. We use this information to respond, evaluate the relevant opportunity, coordinate discussions, and keep related business records.

The contact form composes a message in your email application; it does not submit the form to a Q&D website database. You must send the email for us to receive it. Email is also handled by the email providers involved in delivery. Please avoid sending sensitive personal information or confidential files in an initial inquiry.

3. Information from website visits

Delivering and protecting a website involves technical information such as the requesting IP address, browser or device details, requested page, and request time. Hosting and security providers may process this information to serve pages, investigate errors, and prevent abuse.

The website records a privacy-notice preference in a first-party cookie and a local browser copy for up to one year. It currently has no optional analytics, advertising pixels, or cross-site tracking integrations. It does not use website visitor information for targeted advertising or sell it through the website. The Cookie Notice describes the storage used by this site.

4. How information is used and shared

We use information from this website and its contact channels to communicate with you, consider business and employment inquiries, operate and secure the site, maintain necessary records, and address legal obligations or disputes. We do not treat an inquiry as permission for unrelated campaign targeting.

Information may be handled by people working on the relevant inquiry and by service providers that support website hosting, email, security, or business administration. We may also disclose information when legally required or reasonably necessary to protect people, investigate misuse, or establish or defend legal rights. Do not include another person’s information unless you are authorized to share it.

5. Retention and security

How long correspondence and business records are needed depends on their purpose, whether a conversation becomes an engagement, and applicable legal or recordkeeping requirements. Privacy preferences have the specific duration described in the Cookie Notice. You can ask us about a record or request deletion using the contact below.

No website, device, or email channel can guarantee absolute security. Use the security contact if you suspect unauthorized access or impersonation, and ask for an agreed secure exchange method before sharing sensitive material. Service providers may process information in countries other than your own; the arrangements relevant to a specific client project are addressed separately.

6. Your choices and requests

Use Privacy choices in the footer to review the site’s current storage notice. You can also clear cookies and local storage in your browser. A Global Privacy Control signal keeps any optional tracking integration disabled. There are no optional tracking integrations active on the current site.

Depending on the law that applies to you, you may have rights to access, correct, delete, or receive a copy of personal information, object to or restrict certain uses, withdraw consent where processing depends on it, or complain to a relevant supervisory authority. Contact privacy@quentindundee.com and describe your request. We may need proportionate information to verify identity or authority and will explain any applicable limits. Do not send identity documents unless we agree on a suitable method.

7. Other sites, children, and updates

External websites and services have their own privacy practices. Our public website is intended for professional and institutional audiences, not for children. If you believe a child has sent us personal information, please contact privacy@quentindundee.com so we can review it.

We will update this statement when the site’s information practices change and show the new effective date here. If optional tracking is introduced, the relevant notice and choice will be provided before it is activated where consent is required.
