Quentin & Dundee

Website Terms of Use

The terms for accessing Quentin & Dundee’s website and using its public materials.

Effective September 26, 2026

PUBLIC

1. About this website

This website introduces Quentin & Dundee (Q&D), an independent institutional strategy and growth firm. We work with institutions, organizations, and campaigns across research, strategy, fundraising, communications, audience development, partnerships, technology, and execution. These terms address use of this public website.

A conversation, inquiry, or visit to the website does not establish a client relationship. The scope, fees, responsibilities, confidentiality, ownership, and other terms of an engagement are set out in a separate written agreement. That agreement governs the services it covers.

2. Using the website responsibly

You may browse the website, share links to it, and make reasonable copies of public materials for your own reference or internal evaluation of Q&D. Please preserve attribution and any notices accompanying those materials.

Do not use the website unlawfully, impersonate another person, introduce malicious code, attempt to access restricted systems or data, evade security controls, or interfere with other visitors' access. Do not use automated requests in a way that disrupts the website or misrepresents Q&D's work.

3. Content and brand

The Q&D name, wordmark, website design, and original materials belong to Quentin & Dundee or their respective rights holders. Third-party names, images, and materials remain the property of their owners. Access to this website does not transfer ownership or grant a right to suggest an endorsement, partnership, or affiliation.

For permission to reproduce substantial portions of our materials, use our brand, or publish adapted versions, contact legal@quentindundee.com. Nothing in these terms limits a use that applicable law permits without permission.

4. Inquiries and submissions

The contact form prepares an email in your email application. Q&D receives the information only if you send that email. Please provide information you are authorized to share and limit initial inquiries to what is needed to begin a conversation.

Do not send passwords, payment-card information, sensitive personal records, or confidential institutional materials through a general inquiry. Ask your Q&D contact to agree on an appropriate exchange method first. Sending an unsolicited idea or document does not create a confidentiality obligation or transfer its ownership to Q&D; a separate agreement may establish those terms.

5. Information and external links

Public materials describe our approach and capabilities in general terms. They are not a proposal or a promise of a particular result. Information may change, and a dated article or publication reflects its context at the time it was prepared. Our Service Disclosures explain the scope of the information in more detail.

Links to other websites are provided for context or convenience. Their operators control their content, availability, terms, and privacy practices. A link alone does not mean Q&D endorses that operator or has a commercial relationship with it.

6. Availability and responsibility

We may update, correct, suspend, or remove website content and features. The website is provided as available; we do not promise uninterrupted access, error-free operation, or that every public item is complete or current. Confirm information with us before relying on it for a consequential decision.

To the extent permitted by applicable law, Q&D does not provide implied warranties concerning this public website and is not responsible for indirect losses arising from its use or unavailability. These terms do not exclude rights or liability that cannot lawfully be excluded, and they do not alter obligations under a signed engagement agreement.

7. Privacy, accessibility, and questions

Our Website Privacy Statement and Cookie Notice explain how information and browser storage are handled on this website. Acknowledging the cookie notice is a privacy-preference action, not agreement to a client engagement or a waiver of legal rights.

If you encounter an access barrier, contact accessibility@quentindundee.com with the page and the assistance you need. Questions about these terms can be sent to legal@quentindundee.com. Updates will be posted here with a revised effective date; they do not change an existing engagement agreement.

Quentin & Dundee

QUENTINDUNDEE.COM